Girls.

Girls are of few days and fuil of mischief, and whoseever is deceived thereby is not wise.

When the fair young girl cheweth her gunt with greater haste and stampeth ber preity foot do thou look out.

She comath forth in the evening in low neck and short sleeves, but in the morning she lieth in bed while her mother hustleth. When the slaigh bells tinkieth she standeth at the window and yes rueth for a beau, and when he cometh she filleth up his purse. Ile wrappeth the buffalo robe about her and huggeth her much and stayeth out beyond his time, and the livery man addeth four good dollars to his hill.

In the evening he hieth himself away to her father's mansion. He goeth in and altieth by the fire, and ere she leaveth he popeth the question and she jumpeth at the chance.

When the cock creweth he taketh his departure, and, whan he remembereth the amailment of his ealery, he kicketh him seif and compareth himself to an ase; yea, verily .- [Bloomington Through Mail.

Christmas night, when the youngsters were permitted to ait up to most unwonted hours, it would have done your heart good to see the Major, in his "knickerbockers" a very frequent contume in England and Indla) leading off with ble 6 feet 2 inches, a "wee lassle" of about 3 feet nothing, in "In Sir Roger de Coverley," followed by a motiey group of old and young including mitted-that they hold. nearly our entire party-lay and clerical, male and female -- to the music of the plano, and the unbounded joy of the children. I think it was about the prettiest and pieas. antest christmas child's party I have witnessed for a long time. I should certainly have caught the general infection, and joined the merry throng myself, but that 1 was a little tired with preaching and a littie too strongly eneconced in my arm chair, beside the fire. So I pleaded wearlness and anjoyed it, resting by. And I am sure the dear LORD looked down upon the happy party, and was not displeased with the innocent merriment of the feative egason, "And when he drew near he heard music and dancing." Of course one can't see where the gospel dancing comes in if they "etand a greet way off," nor if they "draw neat" to cavil and criticize. This will oflend some, I know, who are just in that poaitlon, perched upon the frigid aummit of some purltanisel or pharical lechurg of theology. But I can only say I hope I may never have a less innocent erjoyment of a "Merry Christmas" than our delightful one at Futtehgurh. It was quite an ideal one that I had long been inoking for. Our meeting was a most bleased one to the closs. Nearly every soldier of the Durham Light Infantry detachment attended it, and whan we left the station Friday night they marched up to the rallway in a body, and as the train moved off gave us three ringing cheers - with a "hip, hip, hip, hooray" -as only British soldiers can. FARMERS & PLOWMEN.—You should use nothing but the Oliver Chilled Plow, because they are adapted to all kinds of soil and will do first-class work in soil or stubble. The mouldbords are thoroughly Chilled, have no soft ajois in them sud will seour any soil. Obver's metal will not corrole. The beaviest cost of rust that can accumulate on it will be entirely removed by a few minutes' use. The "Oliver" is a thoroughly centre draft Plow, having a Sloping landside, which does away with the pressure found on all straight plows. The Oliver the liet Plow has bundreds of initiators. No manufacturer will try to initiate an inf-rior plow. The "Oliver" has a record unparalleled in the history of plow making, from 1,500 in 1870 to over 160,000 in 1885. Your neighbors will tell you to buy the "Oliver" and take no other. It will breakhard dry ground when no other pow will.

I also have the Gibbs imparial Steel Plow, which is making a record here unequalled by any Steel Plow. Try them and be convinced.

The meeting has been one of deep interest and the result has been several additions to the varions churches in town, besides awakening a profound religious feeling among ail classes. Packed houses have greeted the speaker, Rev. Simone, at aimost every service, and the confidence meetings held in the forenoon were likewise well attended. The solo singing of Miss Alice Nichols, of Danville, was a pleasing feature of the meeting. Rev. Simons left Monday mornlng for Hehron, Obio, where he will conduct a two weeks' revival, at the terminus of which he will go to Hopkineville, this State. In May he expects to go to Stanford, and will likely return here In June and hold a meeting a few miles from town.

B. K. WEAREN, Stanford.

Various Unes to Which Old Stock is Applied-Melhods Adopted by First-Class Restauraleurs-Risks the Baker Must Assume-Floating Trade.

What becomes of the old bread and pastry that must accumulate in every baker-shop! is a question oftener raised than answered. The idea prevalent that the "left-over" stock is soaked and used in the leaven for another day's batch is not only erroneous, but derided by every baker who has a touch of caustle in his make-up. In the largest bakeries, where the city hotels, lunch-counters, private boarding-houses, and restaurants get their supplies, an exclusive order is catered to, and the culculations are so close that a lap of a loaf rarely occurs. In a firm where 1,000 or 1,400 dozen loaves and 100 pans of five dozen rolls each are turned out daily some very nice figuring has to be done in order to make what the kneaders call a clean sweep. With the retail bakers the case is different. Every firm has at least one day in the week when the supply has to double the average daily demand.

RISKS A BAKER MUST ASSUME. Uptown, in the resident quarters, Monday is the hig day, the Friday and Saturday bake having been consumed Sunday, and the fainily washing materially interferes with hot bread or pancakes. Wednesday is shopping day, and Saturday being a sort of general recreation day, a run is made on the downtown cafes and restaurants, and twice the asual amount of bread, rolls, Sally Lund tarts, cakes and pies is necessary to meet the custom. There are a hundred risks to be assumed in anticipating this transient trade, and If the crowd does not materialize the merchant finds his bread-boxes and show-cases still full when business closes. The daily bake goes on, for it does not take him a great while to understand that the public is a petulant customer and will not nibble stale bread or crustyrolls. Between 5 and 7 a. m. the ovens yield up their nice brown blocks and twists of bread, snowy buns and crisp rusks, and to make room for them the residue of the previous day is condemned to side-counters, for which every shop has its regular customers. Pretzels and pies are held over, the former indefinitely and the latter some thirty-six hours. Bread a day old and rolls and cookies of eighteen hours are unsalable to first-class customers, but the charity trade is so large and so urgent that in midwinter many well-to-do bakers are moved by pity to cater to its wants.

Nuns from charltable institutions, matrons of asylums, and overseers of industrial schools, nurseries, and kindred eleemosynary houses constitute a regular and reliable patronage, each of which levies on two or more of these down-town restaurants.

STRUGGLING POOR AND SHABBY GENTEEL. The floating trade is given equal chances with its larger though equally unfortunate rival, and none or few of the early breakfusters have any idea of the poor, patient, hungry mortals who have preceded them. In this procession, which comes and is gone before t s'clock every morning in the year, one sees poor, pale scarustresses, shaleby but respectcheon-box, while the sot, student, boot-black, and newsboy joggle one another at the counter at which are piled doughnuts, lady fingers arn-overs, and Martha Washingtons.

Struggling housekeepers, women who try to support themselves keeping boarders and others who have to subordinate everything to economy, never huy fresh goods, and indeed need not suffer any privation if they only know how to manipulate the old. Bread that can not be steamed will work over as toast. custard fries, and puddings, and there is no roll too old to be rejuvenated if one knows how the readers to know that the restaurateur who serves the most dellcious rolls in Chicago, makes them out of old goods lought from every baker who has any left over. When a customer calls for fresh rolls a couple of the articles, hard enough to dent a turnin, are thrown into a steamer. When thoroughly moistened they are put in a hot oven and al lowed to partially dry. In three minutes a nice white d'oyley is wrapped over them to keep the steam in, and when they melt in Mr. Jenkins' mouth under a lump of butter the order will be repeated. -Inter Ocean.

Jackson and the French Minister The story that has been going the rounds of how some enterprising antiquarian has suc ceeded in trucing the genealogical line of Andrew Jackson up to King Henry VIII Robert Bruce, of Scotland, and even to Charlemagne, is amusing enough in view of the old story of the reception the rough old soldier on a gave to the French minister. English Statistics of Mortality.

From English mortality statistics extending ever a considerable periol, Dr. William Ogle finds that the death-rate among clergymen is lower than that in any other occupation. If the mortality for the three years 1880-82 among ministers be represented by $56, that among farmers will be denoted by 121, among lawyers by 841, and physicians 1.122. The high mortality rate among the doctors is a source of alarm to an eminent medical authority, and is regarded as demanding the most thorough investigation. -

HER ANSWER.

"I'm going to be married," he softly said. She looked up in swift surprise, The color from out of her bright face fled, The light grew dim in her eyes.

You're going to be married!" she echoed low, Her voice had a steady tone. "I hope you'll be happy where'er you go," A cough bld a little moan,

"I know that your bride will be good and true, You never could love any other. She steadily looked in his eyes, dark blue; "I tender you joy, my brother."

"I'm going to be married-that is, I hope To be, though I hardly know—Dear love, shall "longer pine and mope?
I tremble for fear of 'no."

The color that out of her face had fled Came back with a deeper buc; 'Why, isn't it funny," she shyly said, "That I'm to be married, too!" -Roxhury Advocate,

A NOVEL COIN PROPOSED.

Description of the "Cometallic" Dollar-Silver and Gold in one Piece.

Mr. Nicholas Veeder of a Pittshurg firm thus describes his proposed "cometallie" coin:
"The new coln which I have invented, and the adoption of which I propose, consists of an outer disc of silver of the value of 50 cents, resembling a coin with a hole cut through its center. In this holo or center is fitted a disc of gold, also of the value of 50 cents. The gold is held in place by the millings of the silver lapping over the gold and the compression inclient to colnage. There is a double depression where the gold is, and the latter is too thin to admit of alteration.

"It may also be said for this coin, that the abrasion comes on the cheaper metal, the gold being protected by being in a recess. In size it would be only a trifle thicker than the present half dollar, and be easily distinguished in the pocket by the central depression, and when brought to view the eye would readily catch the central color as well as the central legends and devices. The union of the two colors in one colu will also give it an attractlve appearance and gratify an artistic taste.

"The cometallic half dollar would be about the size of a silver quarter, and the cometallic quarter would somewhat exceed the size of the silver dime, but the senses of feeling and sight would warrant the unrestricted mingling in the pocket of all denominations of silver and cometal coins. For the highest convenience, and to the satisfaction of all needs, I would commend only the cometallic dollar. half dollar and quarter, because a $2 coinwhich would be a trifle thicker than our present silver dollar-would not be needed, and a coin of higher value than $3 would be too large and cumbersome for general use, while a coin smaller than the silver dime would be too small for convenience."-Inter Ocean.

The Deceased Kings of Ceylon, In Ceylon, formerly, after burning the bodies of the deceased kings of Kandy, their ashes were carried by a man in a black mask to the Mahawelli Ganga, where he embarked in a canoe. At the deepest part of the river he clove the vase with a sword, scattered the ashes on the stream, and, plunging headlong use a steamer. Although the writer may be after them, dived, arose near the opposite branded as a traitor, it may be interesting to bank, whence he fled into the forest, and was

GOOD OLD DAYS IN OHIO.

THE TIMES WHEN HOUSES WERE LOCKED WITH A WOODEN LATCH.

A Different World from That of the Present Time-A Bonauga of Curiosities - An Ark in the Wilderness - Home Manufacturers.--Itiuerant Tinkerers.

The Ohlo that I lived in as a boy seems a far-away beautiful land that belonged to a very different one from the one I now inhabit. My father was a native of Loudon county, Virginia, and his farm was in the midst of a large settlement of Marylanders and Virginians, who brought with them the manners and customs of their native states, and whose stories and recollections were full of the things they had seen and oxperienced in those places where to them the world had just been

In those days there was nothing about a house and farm, from a fine-toothed comb to a pair of horses and wagon, that people did not borrow or lend. Besides, there was kept up between neighbors a constant exchange of mince ples, sausages, spareribe and all manner of eatables. Whoever killed a beef of other animal always sent a part to his nearest neighbors, and in due time received the like ln return.

THE HOUSES OF THE FIRST SETTLERS. I never saw a lock on the door of any farmhouse in Ohlo; indeed, more than half the houses had no other latches than wooden ones, These were lifted by means of a leather string that always "hung on the outside." There many houses, in no part of which could be found a nall, screw, or any other thing of iron. Doors, windows and all were put together with wooden pins, great and small. The shakes, or "clapboars," of the roof were held in place by "weight poles," small logs, laid upon each length of boards. Some chlmneys were of brick, but many were of sticks and clay.

In the old house of my maternal grandmother were many curious things. There were many bark boxes, neatly sewed together and gaily painted, and adorning the walls were bows, quivers, tomahawks, eagle plumes and the like. For blowing the fire there was In common use a huge fan, made of buckskin, sewed to the spreading prongs of a forked stick, and with a handle as long as that of an ordinary broom-and Indian bellows.

In the garret of this old house I found, as a boy, a bonanza of curlositles. There were linmense horse-pistols with thint locks, old swords and muskets, long hunting knives, and helmets made of rawhide that would have withstood the stroke of a tomahawk. From this garret I one day lugged down to the old lady a pack-saddle-a thing the like of which I had at that time never soon-and asked her what it was. Then she described the use of the sawhuck-looking affair, and told me how in the days before there were any vessels running on Lake Erle their goods were all packed across the Aliegheny mountalus on the backs of horses.

NOAH'S ARR IN THE WILDERNESS. But what I liked best to hear the old lady relate was the story of her coming to Ohio with my grandfather to take possession of a tract of land they had bought in the wilderness. They stopped nearly a year at little burg, where my grandfather caused to be built some barges or that-bouts. These boats were freighted after the fashion of Nosh's ark. They had on board of them horses, cattle, sheep, hogs, dogs, chickens, turkeys, geose, ducks, and all manner of beasts and fowls also, all kinds of farming implements, and the tools of many trudes.

The lients were floated down the Ohio river to Marietta, then were poled and warped up the Muskingnm as far as they could be taken, or to the nearest point to the tract of land that was to be settled upon. When they ar rived on this land there were not men enough In the neighborhood to raise an ordinary log house; therefore their first habitation wa constructed of logs that were split. Around this was constructed a large stockade, into which the sheep, hogs, and most of the other animals had to be brought every evening, if order to prevent their falling prey to hears, wolves and other wild animals.

For many years nearly all the clothing worn was of home manufacture. Even in my time there was spinning and weaving in almost every household. On almost every farm was a "loom-house," in which a loom was kept banging away weaving either linen or woolen cloth. At certain seasons the meadows were seen spread with long webs of bleaching liven. This linen was used for sheets, table-cloths, towels and clothing.

Itineraut shoemakers came with their benches and kits of tools, and remained till all In the family were shod, every farmer having ou hand a supply of leather of his own made at the nearest tannery from the skins of his own animals. In those days they skinned every animal that had a skin when it diedhogs, dogs and all. Men who made a hustness of breaking and drossing thax also went from farm to farm; also those who threshed grain with flails, those who assorted and handled tobacco, and those who split reils. Then there were traveling clock-lo tors and tinners of many kinds, Dancing parties and so dal gatherings of almost every kind, were, in the early times, called "frolies." Basides the "frolies" proper, there were to use and barn-raising , log rollings and corn-larskings -- Cor. Cincinnati En-

Allen, Wluterpock, Va., writes: "My youngest child, two years of age, was taken with Bowel Complaint, which we could not cure. We tried many remedies, but he continued to grow worse, and finally became so reduced in flesh that we could only move him upon a pillow. It was suggested by one of the doctors that Scrofula might be the cause of the trouble. We procured a bottle of
